

I think we can try multithreading and parallel programming for the improvement of web crawler. For example, we can use Akka since it has the Stream parallel programming.

What's more, we could use different functions to get the links. In this assignment's test, there shows that it will recognize the website with the same IP address as one website, but they actually different ones. We should find another function that is more suitable for this problem.